

Where Is She Heading

Jane Stanfield

Speaker, Author, Consultant, and Passionate Global Volunteer

Ever wonder what it would be like to...

- Bottle feed an infant baboon?
- Sing a lullaby to a Peruvian orphan?
- See a grade-school dance performance in another country?
- Lift a 3000-year-old pot from carefully excavated dirt?

Up until recently, neither did I. Several years ago, I happened across the concept of international volunteering and have been passionate about them ever since. I understand what you are experiencing as you begin your search. As your guide, I can help cut down your research time to find your first or next volunteer experience. This type of travel allows you to not only give to others and learn about other cultures, but perhaps most importantly, learn something wonderful about yourself as well.

The keynotes and workshops can be customized for your group and will combine information, resources, images and personal stories about what it is like to serve others as a global volunteer.

After our time together, your first question will not be what, but What First?

Jane Stanfield has experience and a passion for animals, volunteering and international travel. She took a yearlong trip around the world working at 12 volunteer jobs, seven with animals.

She is the award winning author of Mapping Your Volunteer Vacation. Jane assists people, from students to retirees, sort through the myriad of options available and guides them as they focus and research to find the perfect volunteer vacation that fits their interest, time, budget, and heart.

But be warned!
VOLUNTEER VACATIONS CAN BE ADDICTING!

Keynotes and Workshops

Babies, Baboons and Bones! What do these words have in common besides beginning with B? They were Jane's favorite volunteer experiences out of 12 during a yearlong trip around the globe. From working with children in Romania, raising orphan baboons in South Africa, and excavating at a magnificent archaeological site in Thailand, you will see why this kind of service travel can be so addicting. Passports are not required to attend.

KEYNOTE - 30-45 minutes

Mapping Your Volunteer Vacation What exactly is a volunteer vacation? With stories and examples, you will learn about the breadth of opportunities that await you around the world when you go on one of these adventures. Then, using the steps highlighted in the award winning Mapping Your Volunteer Vacation, you can be organized as you plan and create an amazing volunteer vacation that fits your travel and volunteer goals. During the workshop, you will use the workbook to begin planning your first or next volunteer vacation, either for this year or in the future.

BOOK SIGNING with Mini Talk - 30-60 minutes WORKSHOP - 4 hours

Seven Months Without Makeup - Touched by Wildlife Photographs highlight the eight wildlife species that Jane was privileged to get up-close-and-personal with around the globe. From the small echidna in Southern Australia to the tall, elegant giraffes in South Africa, she worked with a range of uncommon wildlife. Come laugh at the animal antics and hear about the lessons to be learned when the animals generously shared themselves with an outsider.

Volunteer Vacations – Traveling on Purpose

People usually have questions when they hear about volunteer vacations: How do I do it? What are they like? Where can I go? Who else will be there? How much will it cost? I don't have the skills or speak the language. Can I still go? How do I find a project that fits my interest and comfort level? HELP! All these questions and more will be answered before the end of the session, because "isn't it time to start seeing other people?"
